Farmers markets can increase access to fresh, healthy foods within a community, while supporting local farmers. When farmers market vendors accept food assistance benefits, fresh produce is more affordable and allows low-income families to stretch their food dollars while eating a healthy diet. Low-income residents can face barriers to shopping at farmers markets, even markets located in underserved communities that accept food assistance.

The Farmers Market Food Navigator program addresses barriers that low-income shoppers face, like building confidence in talking with vendors, selecting produce, and using new foods.

WHAT DOES A FOOD NAVIGATOR DO?

NUTRITION RESOURCES

Provide resources and experiential nutrition education to shoppers at markets, including tastings and cooking demonstrations, that help support healthy eating habits.

HELP SHOPPERS

To effectively use their food dollars at markets through tours that can include introductions to vendors, tips, and providing support.

COMMUNITY OUTREACH

Build awareness of farmers markets and increase awareness of food assistance programs at markets.

IMPLEMENT POLICIES

Work with market managers and vendors to implement policy, systems, and environmental changes supportive of healthy behaviors.

A Farmers Market Food Navigator Playbook was developed to provide structure and direction on each key function of the Food Navigator role and provide guidance to market managers and community partner organizations. The Playbook was designed to provide enough structure for food navigators to implement the program as intended and achieve expected outcomes, while still allowing for flexibility to ensure the program is relevant to the context of the individual farmers markets and the communities they serve.
